FOOD - EASTHORPE NEWS, IT'S NOT JUST THE SHOP THAT'S LOCAL!

Large supermarket chains such as Sainsbury have been quick to respond to the public's demand for sustainably sourced food, dedicating whole sections of their stores to organic produce. Yet, without making a song and dance about it, Easthorpe News have been providing ethically farmed, locally sourced food for years. And when they use the phrase "low food miles" they mean it; most of the food they sell travels less than five miles to reach them.

Their bread, for instance, is delivered fresh from the bakers in Farnsfield four miles away. Buy some for your breakfast and you'll find it's still warm. The milk comes from the Newfield Dairy at Hockerton and is milked and bottled at source while the beef comes from cattle reared and grazed on the River Trent six miles away. Their eggs are free range, naturally, and are delivered daily from Halam and the stilton is from Long Clawson Dairy.

They're not just reducing food miles by sourcing their food locally either. Their fleet of vans, recently rebranded as Easthorpe Food, deliver fresh food all over the surrounding area and save their customers from having to make individual car journeys to buy lunch. They are delighted that local people support their business and return the favour; their meat comes from two local butchers and the salad and vegetables from local Nottinghamshire growers. There's always a warm and friendly welcome for anyone that goes into the shop.

So, when you're buying freshly prepared food, why not go to Easthorpe News and shop local – they do.
