

STAGECOACH SOUTHWELL - More success for Stagecoach student Josh & a visit from West End Stars!

After his success in the tour of 'Beauty and The Beast', playing the part of chip and one of the workhouse boys in 'Oliver' both at the Theatre Royal Nottingham, Joshua Woodman-Clarke was back on stage, this time at the Royal Concert Hall Nottingham playing the part of Jimmy Cooper as a child in the hit show 'Quadrophenia'. Once again, Josh was totally outstanding; he only had one and a half hours to rehearse and was completely professional and made everyone proud.

On the last day of term at Stagecoach, Josh and his fellow students were lucky enough to have two special visitors, David Bell and Ben Stock, who have both just finished in shows in the West End. They popped in on the students to watch them as they enjoyed a 'Mamma Workshop' that the Principal, Michelle Sills, organised for them as a treat for working so hard during the term. Michelle said, "It was an honour to have David and Ben here with us; they chatted to the students, answered questions and watched them at work. It's so important for the students to get to meet people that are doing what they themselves are training for".

The students are also very excited as they are being given the chance to audition for 'Chitty Chitty Bang Bang' when it comes to Nottingham early next year as part of its tour
